Bonus news

Most of you managed to make it along to one of the two bonus communication sessions. In case you missed it, we recorded the session. The communication pack can also be found below.

Everyone should now have completed their goal setting or have a meeting in their diary to complete this with their line manager of practice lead shortly.

We've tried to make it easy to understand and track progress, any questions or comments please let Corrinne know.

2yo company

Profit

Bonus payment

An amazing achievement for our two-year-old company, we made a profit in our second year of trading. This has only been made possible by your awesome contribution. As a thank you we have rewarded our permanent Partners with a bonus which will be paid in your February salary. Your line manager will be in touch in the next day or two if they haven't spoken to you already to communicate your figure.

SharePoint Survey

Thank you to those of you who completed the SharePoint survey. This really helps us understand its successes and how we can continue to improve the site.

It was great to see that the majority of you have accessed the SharePoint and are accessing a variety of areas. If you haven't been able to and would like help in doing so, please email us.

The responses to what you would like to see in the site have been really informative. We'll be updating the key works on all existing documents to improve searchability, and we're working on the navigation of the site.

As a reminder, we have created our Project Partners Community Portal as a great way to provide our communications, blogs and will be developing our training courses.

If you haven't yet filled out the survey, there's still time! Just click the button below.

Blogs everywhere

What does an electrocution and project management have in common? It's not just the pain you feel when something goes wrong.

Today's 'shocking' tale uses Mark's recent DIY disaster to reflect on how we treat assumptions in Project Management.

Check out our latest blog post and learn more.

In the latest internal blog post, Luke explores the opportunity that our shift into the "Metaverse" could represent for project professionals in the future.

Luke's excitement for the Metaverse has led to hours upon hours of researching and imagining its near endless possibilities. Hopefully this blog will open your eyes and bring you in to his world.
